Statements from Veterans For Peace members re: Global War On Terror memorial

“Any national memorial to the ongoing Global War on Terror (GWOT) must serve as a monument to the great horror the US unleashed upon tens of millions of innocent people worldwide, including its own citizens.

If all of this can be included in the monument, it may be something worthy to erect:

- The millions of dead and wounded
- 40,000,000+ refugees, and the continuing suffering of entire nations throughout Africa, the Middle East and Central Asia.
- The extraordinary folly of the war as terror groups were created and expanded in dozens of countries, entire regions were destabilized, and governments were overthrown as the GWOT produced one counterproductive consequence after another.
- The complete betrayal of stated American values and the US Constitution: torture and indefinite detention, civil liberties forever degraded, mass spying on the American people by successive presidential administrations.
- The deliberate lies that enabled and sustained the wars.
- The $8 trillion in lost opportunity costs.
- The costs incurred physically, mentally and spiritually by millions of American veterans and their families, many of which are forever invisible wounds of war such as systemic suicide, traumatic brain injury, respiratory illnesses and cancers among Afghan and Iraq war combat veterans.

If all of this can be included in the monument, it then may be something worthy to erect.”

“Did the US lose the Global War on Terrorism? We must ask: who won and who lost? On the one hand, the US ruling class, the billionaires and state officials who do their bidding, certainly won the war, filling their pockets with blood money. On the other hand, the American working class - along with the masses of Iraqis and Afghans - lost the war; some with their lives, most with betrayal.”

“As I reflect on my time in the Iraq war as a combat medic, I hope this memorial represents all the losses in the global war on terror which includes civilian casualties of the countries the USA invaded. I would hope there will be special recognition for women who served and also everyone who lost their life at home AFTER war due to the lack of reintegration programs which leads to suicide, homelessness and addiction which still plagues our society.”

“The Global War on Terror could be better described as the Global War of Terror. Trillions have been spent, millions have been killed or displaced, and entire generations were given legitimate grievances where perceived grievances existed before. The spoils of war can be visibly seen all across Northern Virginia and Washington, DC, where skyscrapers and mansions derived from war profits adorn the wealthiest zip codes in the country. These overt and covert wars – in Iraq, Afghanistan, Syria, Libya, Yemen, Mali, Mauritania, Nigeria, and far beyond–would be better memorialized with a bronze statue of stacked cash than with another out-of-touch war memorial. If the Vietnam War can be memorialized with a deep black gouge in the earth, perhaps the GWOT can be memorialized by a giant pit for passers-by to throw their hopes and dreams – not like a wishing well, but more like a passageway to hell. War is a racket.”

“I wish people could empathize with the struggles of those living in destitution and oppression, then maybe we could get to the root causes of violence and the response to violence with violence and that whole never ending path of chaos. It saddens me to see this never ending process in our society and the psychological manipulation of our youth to fight these wars for profit while sold a worthy ideological viewpoint. Having a memorial for the global War on terror shows how we desperately need to look within and take some responsibility associated with the laws of cause and effect.”

"As a veteran of the global war on terrorism, I would rather see something built for the untold number of innocent lives we extinguished. But if something has to be built I would rather see the Pentagon papers set into stone so that everyone can see the ineptitude of our leaders and the pointlessness of war. If not that, then I would like there to be a large burn pit placed where the memorial would go, with live ammunition sprinkled in there, so that the American people can get a small taste of what it was like to fight in these wars! Let us stop glorifying war and perpetuating the American exceptionalism myth!"

Kathy Kelly
Nobel Peace Prize Nominee

“Following the September 11 attack on the World Trade Center, family members whose loved ones had been killed that day joined in a walk from Arlington Cemetery to the World Trade Center carrying a banner: ‘Our Grief Is Not a Cry for War.’ They befriended bereaved families in Afghanistan, Iraq, and other places where civilians suffered consequences of the Global War on Terror.

Numerous unarmed delegations have visited people who cannot escape ravages caused by the U.S. wars of choice waged since 9/11. Many have been guided by Howard Zinn’s wise words: ‘There is no flag large enough to cover the shame of killing innocent people.’

Installed in a field, in Pakistan, is a huge depiction of an orphaned Afghan girl, a refugee in Pakistan, holding the shrapnel of a U.S. bomb which killed her parents.

The monument should replicate this visual representation, flanked by the banners mentioned above. A caption could ask: ‘Is she the terrorist? Who are the terrorists?’”

Bio:
Kathy Kelly made over two dozen trips to Afghanistan from 2010 – 2019, living with young Afghan Peace Volunteers in a working-class neighborhood in Kabul. With Voices in the Wilderness companions, from 1996 - 2003, she traveled 27 times to Iraq, defying the economic sanctions and remaining in Iraq throughout the Shock and Awe bombing and the initial weeks of the invasion. She joined subsequent delegations to the West Bank’s Jenin Camp in 2002 during and after Israeli attacks, to Lebanon during the 2006 summer war between Israel and Hezbollah and to Gaza, in 2009, during Operation Cast Lead and following the 2013 Operation Pillar of Defense. Kathy has been an educator for most of her life, but she believes children of war and those who are victims of violence have been her most important teachers.
